This year, the first Wednesday of June will be special, and we strongly recommend that you read through its speech dedicated to the global press freedom we should all pay attention to. We are sharing the speech with you below. It’s an honor to be here today, among many people who are working to protect the free flow of information and the media’s ability to cover important events in our world. But now I want to address something broader, because I firmly believe, and this is the most important thing, that democracy and freedom of the press aren’t just words or topics for academic discussions – these concepts are basic components of human civilization. Indeed, any community without proper respect for the media, and without the basic human rights of freedom of speech, the press, and assembly, cannot be called a free country – simply put, democracy does not exist. As I think about the future of the free flow of information and the media, I think about the interdependence and interconnections of all of us. You, the free-flow information consumers, journalists, bloggers, regulators, and countless others. And you, the groups that violate the free flow of information and the media – the criminals, terrorist organizations, and political regimes. And you, the governments, who do not protect the free flow of information and the media but instead restrict it. And me, as a journalist and writer and passionate human being and defender of the free flow of information and the media. The basic rights to freedom of speech, freedom of the press, and freedom of assembly are the founding principles of democracy and free nations. And for the sake of the world, and for the sake of
