For example, rebuilding a structure will sometimes have the effects of its mesh recalculating itself. This is one of many new Distant chunk changes and model updates that will happen due to the new imposter system. When these changes are rendered, the meshes and textures of the structures would differ depending on if they had been rebuilt or were a pristine piece of the initial structure. This change is really easy to see on your screen if you just walk up to a building that has been rebuilt, but you may see slight changes even when youre standing outside of the building. The new Dynamic Imposter System changes affected POI meshes and textures but did not affect the outline of the structures. To see for yourself if you have the newly updated changelog, head over to www.minecraft.net/studio/mod-versions-list. You can also view the changelog by selecting "Mod versions" from the drop down menu in the Files window and then clicking on the version youd like to view. You can also download the studio version of Minecraft Version 1.0.2 to see the changelog. The studio requires the base version of Minecraft to function; the studio version of the game will not work with other non-update versions of the game. If youre playing the Mojang.com version of Minecraft, you can download a copy of the studio from the website, along with a fix that prevents the Mojang.com version of Minecraft from displaying the changelog in the studio. The people behind the Geoscape Campaign have made changes to their encryption method. They no longer use the Filecoder string 0. After running a few of our tests, we believe that they have changed to a different hashing method. You can download the previous version of the decrypter here.
