A new feature in Photoshop CC 2015 is Content Aware Fill. It replaces Copy & Paste (CTP) tool, which is now a new content-aware tool in which you can select an area of an image, then the tool will replace the surrounding non-selected area with alternative content based on the selected area. Adobe Photoshop Features is not simply background, other areas is repainted on the original area (including a 3D shape) in order to make it look and feel like the original one. Photoshop has always had a feature which makes it easy for people to remove neighbor pixels from images. Pixel surgery simply refers to selecting a pixel and choosing some of the nearby pixels in the layer. If you want to remove more pixels than that, then you can simply expand the selection and delete the ones you don't want. Pixel surgery is now even easier with the new content aware fill, layer aware fill, and dual-pane editing. The content aware fill has left the slider-based selection and now has a simple slider to select and paint new content in the image. Now you can compose your photos without the use of any images to add to an empty canvas. In Photoshop CC 2015, you can add an artboard in your final file and add an image, a text or insert a link. When you add an image to your artboard, the object is completely made up of pixels and therefore responsive, regardless of the dimensions of the element. Adobe Photoshop Features has been introduced and it allows you to create mixed object with extra pixels, which while you have enlarged the text, the background will still maintain its original size without any distortion. While creating capsules, you can simply set the size for the capsule symbol to function as an image or as an illustrative symbol. This feature allows users to create a capsule with a single line rather than the usual double line. Furthermore, we can also apply different features set in a capsule when clicked. For instance, you may apply the vertical or horizontal alignment feature to the element you have created and when you click on it, it will automatically pull out into a capsule.
